How the Grinch stole Christmas

The Grinch stole all the Christmas presents and decorations to stop Christmas from coming.

What did he think while he was doing that? Fill in the thought bubble.

Chaga and the chocolate factory 1

The African sun was bright. The African air was hot and dry. And Chaga shuffled slowly along the dusty trail of his village road.

A man pedaled by on a brand new bicycle. Chaga wished he was that man and not a poor boy with no good clothes and no shoes. And a poor man and a poor dog. And his poor dusty feet.

Suddenly, the man stopped. He dismounted of his bicycle and he looked back at Chaga.

"You, boy?" he called. "What do you think of my bicycle?"

"How strange," thought Chaga. "Is this man a magician? Can he read my mind?"

And he was so surprised that he blurted out, "I like it. I like it very much!"

"Would you like a bicycle of your own?" the man asked.

And Chaga nodded his head. "Yes sir," he said. "Yes, I would! But that was a dream, surely. A dream that would never come back for a poor ten-year-old from a tiny village in Mali."

"Take me to your parents," said the man. And his smile was as bright as the sun. "I come from a place far away where boys like you earn more than enough to take care of their families and buy themselves bicycles, too!"

The African sun was bright. The African air was hot and dry. But Chaga flew down the dusty road his arms wrapped round the waist of the man on the bicycle. And his hopes and dreams were flying too!

Turn off the tap whilst brushing teeth
Most people brush their hair morning whilst brushing their teeth. This wastes up to 5 liters of water per minute or 250,000 liters per family each year!
The wastes huge amounts of water and is pretty stupid! - It's like leaving the toilet flush the whole time you're in it!

Bake something for a friend
Bake something both original and include the most unique ingredient of all, a bit of you. It's amazing what affect even the most rock-like rock cakes can have when baked with your own fat bits. Cover up any cookies with a bit of icing.

Ask "why"
Have you ever looked up into the night sky and asked, "Why can't we build something powerful enough to take man to the moon?" The rest, as they say, is history.

Learn basic first aid
It only takes two hours to learn how to save a life. There is nothing that you can do in two hours that can make such a difference. And let's face it, saving someone's life is pretty cool! Statistically it's much more likely that you will save a friend or relative than a stranger! Imagine saving your best friend's life!

Families and their property

Your partner and you each have a different photo that shows a family and their property in front of their house.

1. Look at your photos and take notes on the following topics:

- where in the world
- how many persons
- kind of building where they live
- neighbourhood (other buildings, nature)
- pets/other animals
- what sort of technical appliances (fridge, microwave oven...)
- food
- means of transportation
- hobbies

Be ready to describe your photos to your partner. Make sure he or she doesn't see your photos while you're describing it.

2. Interview your partner about his or her family. Take notes.

3. Compare your families. Take notes in a chart like the one below on an extra sheet.

similarities	differences

4. Discuss with your partner:

- What does property mean to them?
- What is in the centre of the possession?
- What does the rest of it about their values?

You have one part of Chaga's story. In your expert group, read, understand and practice reading your part of the story. Do this carefully because later on the members of your home group will need your expertise.

1. Read the text and underline keywords you will need to retell this part of the story.
2. Talk about the story and help each other to make notes that will help you to tell the story to your group later.
3. Use the picture and your notes to practice telling this part of the story with a partner.
4. Find a heading for your part of story and write it down at the top of your text.

They reached the plantation this morning, and when they had waved goodbye to the bicycle man, the boy went back to his shack. "This is where you'll sleep," said a new man. But he did not smile. "Not at all. One by one, the boys went onto the shack. And oh, the smell! The air was thick with sweat. The floor was damp with urine. And Chaga could hardly breathe. There were other boys already in the shack, huddled in corners and covered together in stinky mats. Chaga tucked to the door.

There must be some mistake, he thought. This could not possibly be the Bicycle Place. But as he turned, the door slammed shut and the lock clicked and he was behind him.

Some of the bigger boys threw themselves at the door, hoping to burst it open with their shoulders or their feet. But Chaga just dropped to the floor, rubbing the tears from his eyes with the back of his hand. "They won't break it down," a voice whispered. "We have tried that before."
